

Chapter 0663

Epilogue 6

I was kept in the hospital for a full week after I woke up. Sierra's parents took all kinds of samples for testing and actually packed a bunch up from me and the girls to take back to their lab to see if they can find a pattern or a way to help our family in the future. Elena and Gentry made sure that we had all of the best healing herbs and spells too.

Everyone was extra careful with me and I got it... sort of. I know that no one knows what is going to happen, but according to the legend of our family, having the first female was supposed to be the most traumatic part. No one actually talked about the healing part after or what happened when it was over. So we are just winging it as usual when it comes to me and my weird abilities.

No one has said anything, but I know everyone wants to know if Ori will have gifts or if all three girls will. According to our legend, it should just be Ori as the first born, but the guys and I have talked about it and nothing has been according to plan when it comes to me, so we can't rule out that all the girls will carry whatever crazy genetics I have. We also have to assume that any other kids we have will carry the genes too.

Any kids we have from now on should be normal pregnancy and birth. I don't think my mates are going to take any chances though. I can't believe I am already thinking about 'next time' but I know there will be. If I can get pregnant at any time without a heat, then we are going to end up with a brood.

2 years later

"AH! What are you doing? Don't teach her to do that! What is wrong with you?" Ava shouts at Dakota who has Dani standing on his shoulders ready to dive into the pool.

The rest of us are laughing. There is no stopping Dani when she gets an idea in her head. If she wants to try something she's going to whether we approve or not. So we have just learned to keep her as safe as we can. Ori is standing on the sides observing. She is all in on this too. She actually came up with the idea to jump from higher and higher surfaces to see how high they could get. But being the thinker of the three she made it sound so exciting that her daredevil sister had to try jumping off Daddy's shoulders first. My Charlie girl is coloring at the little table we have by the pool, pretending not to pay attention. She is more quiet than the other two, but no less daring. She's going to have to be the one we watch the most, she will be sneaky. The three of them together spells absolute trouble and they're only two.

"Alphas! You are needed at the border. We have a situation.”

It wasn't a panicked message, but I could feel the urgency. I look at my mates as we walk in and I can tell they are mindlinking together. “If you even suggest that I stay behind you will not get laid for a month. Understand?” I shoot a look at each of them.

It's been two years since the girls got here and three since the battle with Vincent and Adrielle. I think that they have some form of PTSD now and always think someone is coming for me or the girls. We leave Sierra, Jena, Ava, Elena and Gwen in charge of the kids and we all head out to the border.

Mateo and Sam weren't going to be left out. They follow behind in a second SUV and Lil will meet us, she's running a patrol.

We pull up to our newly renovated border. The humans don't know why it was adapted, but it is completely for our safety. There is an entry road and an exit road about five miles apart with a dense grove of trees between. It adds to the ambiance of the preserve we live on and has actually attracted more tourists which is good for us. The money has helped many of our families get back on their feet after the battle and with our pack members running almost all of the stores, shops and hotels we can keep an eye on everything. Several of our warriors actually do guided hiking tours. This keeps the humans happy and our wolves safe to roam.

A young warrior named Liam is standing over someone on their knees. He's too big for me to see past, but I can tell it's a guy. I take a deep breath and freeze. There's no way.

"What is it, Bitty?" Oliver has his arm around my waist immediately feeling my hesitation. The pound of his heart keeps me focused.

Cam walks up to Liam. "What's going on?" He stands next to the warrior looking down on whoever they have in custody, looking like the intimidating Alpha he is. He, Dakota and Oliver have actually put on more weight since I had the girls, and it's not in a dad-bod kind of way. They started training more, training the warriors more, and working with the pups more. They have taken this protective dad thing to a whole other level. I have to shake my head, I can't let my libido distract me. I can feel Oliver chuckle behind me, he knows what just ran through my mind.

"This guy says he has business with the boss, but he won't say what. He hasn't said anything since he asked to talk to Alpha Sky."

Cam looks over his shoulder at me, this is his biggest fear, someone coming to attack me or the girls. He's actually woken us all up with his nightmares. 1

"It's okay." I tap Oliver's arm around my waist, Cam needs me right now. I need to be in contact with him so he'll let me see who this is. I think I know, but I have to see it with my eyes to be sure. I grab Cam's hand and place myself in front of him, he wraps his other arm around me and pulls me back to his chest.

"Figures you find a way to bypass being a Luna and become an Alpha." Robbie laughs. He is scruffy and filthy. The last couple years have not been good to him. He looks emaciated and worn out.

"I'm here Robbie, what do you want?" I have to stay neutral. I haven't seen him since he brought Elena to us. I assumed he died in the fight with the rest of the rogues. Cam squeezes my hand when I say Robbie's name. He wasn't prepared for me to know him, let alone be familiar enough to have a casual conversation. I don't know if he recognizes the name from when we rescued Elena or not.

"Actually, Alpha...Are you really an Alpha?" I roll my eyes and nod. I tilt my head to let him know to get on with his story. His small attempt at bravado slips. "I was actually wondering if you had a place in your pack for me. I know you took in a bunch of people from Vincent's uprising and I tried to stay away and live on my own, but, well, you can see that isn't going so well for me."